

भगवद्गीता

*The Bhagavad Gītā*The Song of the Blessed One

धृतराष्ट्र उवाच ॥

dhṛtarāṣṭra uvāca || Dhritarashtra spoke:

धर्मक्षेत्रे कुरुरुक्षेत्रे समवेता युयुत्सवः॥

dharmakṣetre kurukṣetre samavetā yuyutsavaḥ || on the field of dharma, on the field of the Kurus, gathered together, eager for battle

मामकाः पाण्डवाश्चेव किमकुर्वत सँजय ॥१॥

māmakāḥ pāṇḍavāścaiva kimakurvata samjaya ||1|| mine and the sons of Pandu what did they do, O Samjaya?

The Bhagavad Gita is perhaps the most famous text in Indian philosophy. It is part of a much larger text, the Mahabharata, the great story of India that is the longest epic poem ever written. The story of the Mahabharata recounts a great war between the Kaurava and Pandava princes. The Bhagavad Gita tells a small part of this story, but in that story the core teachings of the Upanishads are summarized in a most dramatic setting. The Bhagavad Gita was composed, at least in part, as a response to the challenges to the philosophy of the Upanishads that were raised in Jainism and Buddhism, and is thus very important in the development of the philosophy of Hinduism. The story takes place before a great battle is about to start, and it recounts the exchange between Arjuna, one of the Pandava princes, and his charioteer Krishna. The setting dramatizes the whole problem of Indian philosophy. If it is the consequence of one's actions that leads to the karma that binds one to samsara, then how can one act at all in the world and still attain the enlightenment that is liberation (moksha) from samsara? Even good actions, though they would result in better karma and thus better rebirth, still lead to further rebirth. The first words of the text make clear the philosophical problem that is the context of the story. The whole story of The Bhagavad Gita is narrated by Sanjaya, the charioteer of Dhritarashtra, the blind king of the Kauravas. In the opening lines, the king asks Sanjaya what is happening on the "field of dharma" (Dharmakshetra) and the "field of the Kurus" (Kurukshetra). Kurukshetra refers to the particular place, the land where this legendary battle took place. Dharmakshetra refers to the philosophical context of the story. It is not insignificant that the first word of The Bhagavad Gita, after the introductory words "Dhritarashtra spoke," is dharma. A most important word in Indian philosophy, dharma in this context might best be translated as 'righteousness' or as 'duty' in the sense of one's moral obligation. All of us are on the 'field of dharma' whenever there is a concern for right action, and there probably cannot be a more dramatic setting than a battlefield for focusing on this problem.

In the story Sanjaya relates to his king, Arjuna has directed his charioteer to drive the chariot between the armies so he can better survey the field. As he looks across the field to the opposing army, Arjuna recognizes people he has known all his life, some former teachers, and cousins and uncles of the Kaurava clan. The first chapter tells of the sounding of the horns, the blowing the conchshells, prior to the battle, and then Sanjaya tells of Arjuna's despair. He does not see how it could possibly be right, and thus in accord with dharma, to go forward with this battle and kill those whom he does not want to kill. The rest of the story, and thus the main body of The Bhagavad Gita is Krishna's response to Arjuna's dilemma. It is also not insignificant that Krishna is Arjuna's charioteer, for the teaching that Krishna delivers in The Bhagavad Gita concerns yoga. The word 'yoga' is derived from the same source as the English word 'yoke'. A charioteer was thus literally a 'yogi,' one who yoked horses to the chariot. Thus, the charioteer Krishna is a yogi, a teacher of yoga, and the main teaching of The Bhagavad Gita is that Arjuna's dilemma cannot be really be solved unless one has mastered yoga. It turns out that Krishna is also an avatar, an incarnation of the god Vishnu, one of the three principal gods of classical Hinduism (along with Brahma and Shiva). In the most dramatic scene of the story the identity of Krishna is revealed to Arjuna. Vishnu is the god who helps human beings in a time of crisis, and in The Bhagavad Gita he is incarnated as Krishna in order to help human beings deal with the problem faced on the field of dharma.

On one level, some might find The Bhagavad Gita to be a disturbing text, for the advice Krishna gives to Arjuna is that he should rise above his despair and fight the battle. Although The Bhagavad Gita ends before the battle begins, it is clear from the Mahabharata that what follows is a very bloody battle in which many are slain. The second chapter outlines the major themes of Krishna's teaching. At first Krishna tells Arjuna that it is shameful and cowardice not to fight. Arjuna then explains further that his problem is that there are conflicting dharmas. In Indian society one's moral obligation or duty (dharma) was determined by one's caste. The duty of a prince or warrior (kshatriya), for example, would be different from that of a priest (brahmin). As Arjuna is a prince it was his duty to fight. On the other hand, however, Arjuna sees that he will have to kill even members of his own extended family and he doesn't see how this could be consistent with another duty to preserve the family. How could the whole order of society be maintained, Arjuna asks, if this sacred dharma is violated?

Krishna then lays out four arguments why Arjuna should not despair and thus rise up to fight the battle. In these arguments Krishna is restating the basic teachings of the Upanishads. In the first argument (verses 11-25) Krishna restates the fundamental teaching of the Upanishads that the true self (Atman) never really dies. The true self has always existed and will never cease to exist. Verse 16 expresses clearly the view that reality is unchanging—whatever exists (being) must continue to exist, nothing that does not exist (non-being) can come to exist. Verses 18 and 19 repeat almost word for word the teaching in verses 18 and 19 of the second chapter of the Katha Upanishad. The true self does not die when the body perishes; and thus if the slayer thinks that it slays and the one who is slain thinks it is slain, then they do not understand the truth of the nature of the self. Verse 22 is famous for its analogy that reincarnation into new bodies is like discarding worn-out clothes and putting on new ones. In verses 26 and 27 Krishna puts forth a different argument, suggesting that, even if one does not understand that the true self never is slain, Arjuna shouldn't worry for those who die in battle will end up being reborn again. In verses 31-33 Krishna puts forth another argument that Arjuna must follow his caste duty as a kshatriva and fight. There is the suggestion, in verse 33 when Krishna refers to a 'war of sacred duty (dharma)' that the war is a just war, at least from the side of the Pandavas, and this is what the larger context of the story of the Mahabharata suggests. In verses 34-36 Krishna puts forth a final argument that Arjuna will be shamed if he doesn't do his duty and fight the battle.

These arguments, however, are just preliminaries as Krishna's real teaching doesn't begin until verse 39 where he explains that the real solution to the problem of karma faced on the field of dharma is yoga. The Bhagavad Gita is famous for its teaching about yoga, and in that teaching Krishna explains three different types of yoga: karma yoga, the yoga of meditation, and the yoga of devotion. Each of these types of yoga is introduced, at least briefly, in the second chapter. In verses 47 and 48

| कर्म योग                   |  |
|----------------------------|--|
| karma yogakarma yoga   | the yoga of action   |
| राज योग                    |  |
| rāja yogaraja yoga     | the "royal" yoga; the yoga of knowledge yoga of meditation |
| भक्ति योग                  |  |
| bhakti yogabhakti yoga | the yoga of devotion                                       |

karma yoga is introduced. Here Krishna explains that if one acts without being concerned for the fruit of action, then the action will not result in the accumulation of karma binding one to rebirth. In this one can see the response to the teachings of Jainism and Buddhism. The solution to the problem of karma taught in Jainism was basically to try as much as possible to not act at all. Krishna's teaching, developed in the third chapter, suggests that this solution is impractical as it is not really possible to avoid action as long as one is in this world. One cannot avoid acting in the world, Krishna teaches, but if one acts completely unselfishly, without selfish desire, without a concern for a reward for the action, then the action will not result in further karma. This teaching is basically in agreement with the 2nd Noble Truth of Buddhism in emphasizing the surrendering of desire as the key to enlightenment. At the end of chapter two, in verse 71, Krishna even says that if one renounces all desire and craving then one finds the bliss of nirvana. Krishna's teaching differs from Buddhism, of course, in putting forth the teachings of the Upanishads that Buddhism rejects. In contrast to the Buddhist teaching on interdependent arising and impermanence, Krishna's teaching emphasizes that the true self within (Atman) is identical with the great essence of reality (Brahman) that never arose in the first place because it always was, and will never pass away because it always will be.

After teaching about karma yoga, Krishna explains, in verse 49 of the second chapter, that this yoga is inferior to the yoga of understanding, and here is where Krishna introduces the royal yoga, the yoga of meditation. One reason why the yoga of meditation is superior to karma yoga is that even to be capable of truly selfish action would require the knowledge of the self that comes through meditation. There are surely many actions one might think are done selflessly that are really motivated by an unconscious selfish desire. Most of the remainder of the second chapter, and then the whole of the sixth chapter, are focused on explaining this yoga and describing the yogi, the one who has mastered this discipline. The sixth chapter might even be read as a basic introduction to the yoga of meditation. Krishna explains how one should sit, how one should focus the attention of one's gaze on the tip of the nose so that the mind does not wander. The aim of meditation is to bring the mind to a point of stillness, suggested in the famous simile of verse 19, where it is suggested the mind in meditation is like a lamp, or candle flame, sheltered from the wind. A flame will flicker in the wind, but when it is sheltered from the wind it will become still. Krishna's

The Eight Limbs of Yoga from the Yoga Sūtras of Patañjali

 $S\bar{a}dhan\bar{a}s$  (The Eight Methods or "Limbs" of Yoga)

- 1. Yama (The 5 Restraints: non-violence, non-lying, non-stealing, non-grasping, celibacy)
- 2. Niyama (Observances: cleanliness, contentment, purificatory action, study, devotion)
- 3. Āsana (body postures)
- 4. Prāṇāyāma (skillful breathing exercises)
- 5. Pratyāhāra (control of the senses)
- 6. Dhāraṇā (concentration)
- 7. Dhyāna (meditation, meditative absorption)
- 8. Samādhi (highest state of meditation, concentration, "trance," a state of enstasis or enstasy) teaching emphasizes that when the mind comes to this calm, stillness, then the true self (Atman) that is one with the infinite spirit (Brahman) will be known. The highest state of meditation will be this realization in which Atman is understood to be one with Brahman. This self-realization would complete the goal of yoga to tie or yoke together the self and its true identity. This discipline of the yoga of meditation would be developed at great length in a later text, the famous Yoga Sutras written by a master of yoga named Patanjali. Following the example of the Buddha's eightfold path, Patanjali outlines eight steps or limbs of yoga. It is interesting to compare Patanjali's eight limbs of yoga with the eightfold path of Buddhism. Both of them end in meditation. The three last stages of the eight limbs of yoga and the eightfold path are deeper and deeper states of meditation. The highest stage of meditation in both is described as samadhi, and yet, obviously, just exactly what is meant by this high level state of concentration would be very different in Hinduism and Buddhism.

While Krishna's teaching in chapter six emphasizes the importance of the yoga of

The Eightfold Path from the First Sermon of the Buddha The Eightfold Path (Sanskrit, Pali)

- 1) Right View or Understanding (dṛṣṭi, diṭṭhi)
- 2) Right Resolve or Intention or Thought (samkalpa, sankappa)
- 3) Right Speech (vāc, vācā)
- 4) Right Action (karmānta, kammanta)
- 5) Right Livelihood ( $\bar{a}j\bar{v}a$ )
- 6) Right Effort (vyāyāma, vāyāma)
- 7) Right Mindfulness (smṛti, sati)
- 8) Right Concentration (samādhi)

meditation, The Bhagavad Gita is most known for an emphasis on bhakti yoga, or the yoga of devotion. The yoga of devotion is introduced, or at least hinted at in verse 61 of the second chapter when Krishna says that the one who is disciplined in yoga "should focus on me." In much of the rest of the book the theme of the yoga of devotion is developed, climaxing in the scene in which Krishna reveals himself to Arjuna in all his terrifying majesty. After hearing about all of Krishna's powers, Arjuna asks to see Krishna's divine form. Krishna then gives Arjuna a supernatural or 'celestial eye' so that Arjuna may see his divine form. The narrative now returns to Sanjaya describing to the blind king the awesome revelation of Krishna's divine form to Arjuna. The entire universe in all its multiplicity is seen as Krishna's body, and all of existence is seen as rushing headlong like a river into Krishna's flaming mouths. Krishna reveals Himself as Time, the destroyer of worlds. Krishna then again exhorts Arjuna to fight, to slay all his enemies. Arjuna can only be the occasion, for they are already slain by Krishna. In terrified ecstasy Arjuna acknowledges Krishna as the God of gods, the Supreme resting place of the world. As Arjuna is no longer able to behold the tremendous vision, Krishna returns to his previous human form, and ends by telling Arjuna that whoever worships Him, without attachment, and free from enmity toward all creatures, will be united with Him

Whether the yoga of meditation or the yoga of devotion is more important is one of the crucial issues in the debate about the interpretation of The Bhagavad Gita. The emphasis on bhakti yoga in The Bhagavad Gita led to the development of devotional Hinduism in medieval India. The Bhagavad Gita is thus the most important text in devotional Hinduism today, which manifests in a number of devotional sects of Hinduism, the most well known being the Hare Krishna movement, founded by the Indian guru A.C. Bhaktivedanta Swami Prabhupada. As suggested by his title, this teacher certainly emphasized the importance of bhakti yoga. Whether the yoga of meditation or the yoga of devotion are two different paths that lead to the same goal, or whether both are necessary to reaching this goal are interesting philosophical questions raised by The Bhagavad Gita. Is it enough to chant "Hare Krishna" or is it more important to meditate and come to the state of samadhi? The same issue comes up in the development of Buddhism. The notion of the celestial Buddhas in Mahayana Buddhism opened up many devotional forms of Mahayana Buddhism that have had a significant impact on East Asian cultures. Some of the forms of Mahayana Buddhism, such as Pure Land Buddhism, emphasize the chanting of the name of Amida Buddha (one of the celestial Buddhas), while others, most notably Zen, emphasize the importance of meditation.

The Bhagavad Gita is certainly one of the most important texts in Indian philosophy. It provides a succinct restatement of the fundamental teaching of the Upanishads about Atman and Brahman, and it develops the teaching of yoga in the Upanishads, outlining three different types of yoga. Included below is the introductory chapter explaining Arjuna's dilemma, the second chapter that introduces the main themes of Krishna's response to Arjuna's dilemma, and then the sixth chapter that relates Krishna's teaching concerning the yoga of meditation.

An Illustration of the Kurukshetra War in the Mahabharata

THE FIRST TEACHING

Arjuna's Despair

Dhritarashtra

Sanjaya, tell me what my sons and the sons of Pandu did when they met, wanting to battle on the field of Kuru, on the field of sacred duty?

Sanjaya

Your son Duryodhana, the king, seeing the Pandava forces arrayed, approached his teacher Drona and spoke in command.

> "My teacher, see the great Pandava army arrayed by Drupada's son, your pupil; intent on revenge.

Here are heroes; mighty archers equal to Bhima and Arjuna in warfare, Yuyudhana, Virata, and Drupada, your sworn foe on his great chariot.

Here too are Dhrishtaketu, Cekitaila, and the brave king of Benares; Purujit, Kuntibhoja, and the manly king of the Shibis.

Yudhamanyu is bold, and Uttamaujas is brave; the sons of Subhadra and Draupadi all command great chariots.

Now, honored priest, mark the superb men on our side as I tell you the names of my army's leaders.

| They are you and Bhishma,             |
|---------------------------------------|
| Karna and Kripa, a victor in battles, |
| your own son Ashvatthama,             |
| Vikarna, and the son of Somadatta.    |
|                                       |

Many other heroes also risk their lives for my sake, bearing varied weapons and skilled in the ways of war.

Guarded by Bhishma, the strength of our army is without limit; but the strength of their army, guarded by Bhima, is limited.

In all th movements of battle, you and your men, stationed according to plan. must guard Bhishma well!

Bhishma, fiery elder of the Kurus, roared his lion's roar and blew his conch horn, exciting Duryodhana's delight.

Conches and kettledrums, cymbals, tabors, and trumpets were sounded at once and the din of tumult arose.

1

2

3

5

6

7

Standing on their great chariot yoked with white stallions, Krishna and Arjuna, Pandu's son, sounded their divine conches.

Krishna blew Pancajanya, won from a demon; Arjuna blew Devadatta, a gift of the gods; fierce wolf-bellied Bhima blew Paundra, his great conch of the east.

Yudhisththira, Kunti's son, the king, blew Anantavijaya, conch of boundless victory; his twin brothers Nakula and Sahadeva blew conches resonant and jewel toned.

The king of Benares, a superb archer, and Shikhandin on his great chariot, Drishtadyumna, Virata, and indomitable Satyaki, all blew their conches.

Drupada, with his five grandsons, and Subhadra's strong-armed son, each in his turn blew their conches, O King.

The noise tore the hearts of Dhritarashtra's sons, and tumult echoed through heaven and earth.

10

9

8

11

12

13

15

14

16

17

18

19

| Arjuna, his war flag a rampant monkey, saw Dhritarashtra's sons assembled as weapons were ready to clash, and he lifted his bow. | 20 | Krishna, I seek no victory,or kingship or pleasures.What use to us are kingship,delights, or life itself?                                       | 32 |
|--|----|---|----|
| He told his charioteer:  "Krishna, halt my chariot between the armies!   | 21 | We sought kingship, delights and pleasures for the sake of those assembled to abandon their lives and fortunes in battle.                                   | 33 |
| Far enough for me to see.these men who lust far war,ready to fight with mein the strain of battle.                   | 22 | They are teachers, fathers, sons, and grandfathers, uncles, grandsons, fathers and brothers of wives, and other men of our family.                          | 34 |
| I see men gathered here,eager to fight,bent on serving the follyof Dhritarashtra's son."                             | 23 | I do not want to kill them even if I am killed, Krishna; not for kingship of all three worlds, much less for the earth!                                     | 35 |
| When Arjuna had spoken, Krishna halted their splendid chariot between the armies.  | 24 | What joy is there for us, Krishna, in killing Dhritarashtra's sons? Evil will haunt us if we kill them, though their bows are drawn to kill.                | 36 |
| Facing Bhishma and Dronaand all the great kings,he said; "Arjuna, seethe Kuru men assembled here!"                   | 25 | Honor forbids us to kill our cousins, Dhritarashtra's sons; how can we know happiness if we kill our own kinsmen?   | 37 |
| Arjuna saw them standing there: fathers, grandfathers, teachers, uncles, brothers, sons, grandsons, and friends.                 | 26 | The greed that distorts their reason blinds them to the sin they commit in ruining the family, blinds them to the crime of betraying friends.               | 38 |
| He surveyed his eldersand companions in both armies,all his kinsmenassembled together.                               | 27 | How can we ignore the wisdom of turning from this evil when we see the sin of family destruction, Krishna?  | 39 |
| Dejected, filled with strange pity,he said this:Krishna, I see my kinsmengathered here, wanting war.                 | 28 | When the family is ruined, the timeless laws of family duty ( dharma ) perish; and when duty ( dharma ) is lost, chaos overwhelms the family. | 40 |
| My limbs sink,my mouth is parched,my body trembles,the hair bristles on my flesh.                                    | 29 | In overwhelming chaos, Krishna, women of the family are corrupted; and when women are corrupted, disorder is born in society.                               | 41 |
| The magic bow slips from my hand, my skin burns, I cannot stand still, my mind reels.  | 30 | This discord drags the violators and the family itself to hell; for ancestors fall when rites of offering rice and water lapse.                             | 42 |
| I see omens of chaos,Krishna, I see no goodin killing my kinsmenin battle.   | 31 | The sins of men who violate the family create disorder in society that undermines the constant laws of caste (varna) and family duty (dharma).              | 43 |

| Krishna, we have heard that a place in hell is reserved for men who undermine family duties.              | 44 | The flaw of pity blights my very being; conflicting sacred duties ( dharma ) confound my reas I ask you to tell me decisively—which is better? I am your pupil. Teach me what I seek! | on.7 |
|---|----|--|----------|
| I lament the great sin we commit when our greed for kingship and pleasures drives us to kill our kinsmen. | 45 | I see nothing that could drive awaythe grief that withers my senses;even if I won the kingdoms of unrivaled wealthon earth and sovereignty over gods.                            | 8        |
| If Dhritarashtra's armed sons kill me in battle when I am unarmed   |    | Sanjaya  |          |
| and offer no resistance,it will be my reward."  | 46 | Arjuna told thisto Krishna—then saying,"I shall not fight,"  |          |
| Saying this in the time of war,Arjuna slumped into the chariot  |    | he fell silent.  | 9        |
| and laid down his bow and arrows, his mind tormented by grief.  | 47 | Mocking him gently, Krishna gave this counsel As Arjuna sat dejected, between the two armies.  | 10       |
| TUIL OF COVE TO A CULLY  |    | Lord Krishna   | 10       |
| THE SECOND TEACHING Philosophy and Spiritual Discipline (Yoga)  |    |  |          |
| 1 miosophy and spiritual Discipline (10ga)  |    | You grieve for those beyond grief, and you speak words of insight;   |          |
| Sanjaya   |    | but learned men do not grieve  |          |
| Arjuna sat dejected,  |    | for the dead or the living.  | 11       |
| filled with pity,   |    | Never have I not existed,  |          |
| his sad eyes blurred by tears.  |    | nor you, nor these kings;  |          |
| Krishna gave him counsel.   | 1  | and never in the future  |          |
| Lord Krishna  |    | shall we cease to exist.   | 12       |
| Why this cowardice  |    | Just as the embodied self  |          |
| in time of crisis, Arjuna?  |    | enters childhood, youth, and old age,  |          |
| The coward is ignoble, shameful,  |    | so does it enter another body;   |          |
| foreign to the ways of heaven.  | 2  | this does not confound a steadfast man.  | 13       |
| Don't yield to impotence!   |    | Contracts with matter wells as feel  |          |
| It is unnatural in you!   |    | Contacts with matter make us feel heat and cold, pleasure and pain.  |          |
| Banish this petty weakness from your heart.   |    | Arjuna, you must learn to endure   |          |
| Rise to the fight, Arjuna!  | 3  | fleeting things as they come and go!   | 14       |
| Arjuna  |    | When these cannot torment a man,   |          |
| Krishna, how can I fight  |    | when suffering and joy are equal for him and he has courage,   |          |
| against Bhishma and Drona   |    | he is fit for immortality.   | 15       |
| with arrows   |    | ne is ne for immortantey.  | 10       |
| when they deserve my worship?   | 4  | Nothing of nonbeing comes to be,   |          |
| This between this would be be a few arms of final   |    | nor does being cease to exist;   |          |
| It is better in this world to beg for scraps of food than to eat meals smeared with the blood             |    | the boundary between these two   |          |
| of elders I killed at the height of their power   |    | is seen by men who see reality.  | 16       |
| while their goals were still desires.   | 5  | Indestructible is the presence   |          |
| 0   |    | that pervades all this;  |          |
| We don't know which weight is worse to bear—  |    | no one can destroy   |          |
| our conquering them or their conquering us.   |    | this unchanging reality.   | 17       |
| We will not want to live if we kill   |    |  |          |
| the sons of Dhritarashtra assembled before us.  | 6  |  |          |

| Our bodies are known to end,                      |    | The self embodied in the body                    |    |
|---|----|--|----|
| but the embodied self is enduring,                |    | of every being is indestructible;                |    |
| indestructible, and immeasurable;                 |    | you have no cause to grieve                      |    |
| therefore, Arjuna, fight the battle!              | 18 | for all these creatures, Arjuna!                 | 30 |
| He who thinks this self a killer                  |    | Look to your own duty (dharma);                  |    |
| and he who thinks it killed,                      |    | do not tremble before it;                        |    |
| both fail to understand;                          |    | nothing is better for a warrior (kshatriya)      |    |
| it does not kill, nor is it killed.               | 19 | than a battle of sacred duty (dharma).           | 31 |
| It is not born, it does not die;                  |    | The doors of heaven open                         |    |
| having been, it will never not be;                |    | for warriors who rejoice                         |    |
| unborn, enduring, constant and primordial,        |    | to have a battle like this                       |    |
| it is not killed when the body is killed.         | 20 | thrust on them by chance.                        | 32 |
| Arjuna, when a man knows the self                 |    | If you fail to wage this war                     |    |
| to be indestructible, enduring, unborn,           |    | of sacred duty ( dharma ),                |    |
| unchanging, how does he kill                      |    | you will abandon your own duty                   |    |
| or cause anyone to kill?                          | 21 | and fame only to gain evil.                      | 33 |
| As a man discards worn-out clothes                |    | People will tell                                 |    |
| to put on new and different ones,                 |    | of your undying shame,                           |    |
| so the embodied self discards its worn-out bodies |    | and for a man of honor                           |    |
| to take on other new ones.                        | 22 | shame is worse than death.                       | 34 |
| Weapons do not cut it,                            |    | The great chariot warriors will think            |    |
| fire does not burn it,                            |    | you deserted in fear of battle;                  |    |
| waters do not wet it,                             |    | you will be despised                             |    |
| wind does not wither it.                          | 23 | by those who held you in esteem.                 | 35 |
| It cannot be cut or burned;                       |    | Your enemies will slander you,                   |    |
| it cannot be wet or withered;                     |    | scorning your skill                              |    |
| it is enduring, all-pervasive,                    |    | in so many unspeakable ways—                     |    |
| fixed, immovable, and timeless.                   | 24 | could any suffering be worse?                    | 36 |
| It is called unmanifest,                          |    | If you are killed, you win heaven;               |    |
| inconceivable, and immutable;                     |    | if you triumph, you enjoy the earth;             |    |
| since you know that to be so,                     |    | therefore, Arjuna, stand up                      |    |
| you should not grieve!                            | 25 | and resolve to fight the battle!                 | 37 |
| If you think of its birth                         |    | Impartial to joy and suffering,                  |    |
| and death as ever-recurring,                      |    | gain and loss, victory and defeat,               |    |
| then too, Great Warrior,                          |    | arm yourself for the battle,                     |    |
| you have no cause to grieve!                      | 26 | lest you fall into evil.                         | 38 |
| Death is certain for anyone born,                 |    | Understanding is defined in terms of philosophy; |    |
| and birth is certain for the dead;                |    | now hear it in spiritual discipline (yoga).      |    |
| since the cycle is inevitable,                    |    | Armed with this understanding, Arjuna,           |    |
| you have no cause to grieve.                      | 27 | you will escape the bondage of action (karma).   | 39 |
| Creatures are unmanifest in origin,               |    | No effort in this world                          |    |
| manifest in the midst of life,                    |    | is lost or wasted;                               |    |
| and unmanifest again in the end.                  |    | a fragment of sacred duty (dharma)               |    |
| Since this is so, why do you lament?              | 28 | saves you from great fear.                       | 40 |
| Rarely someone sees it,                           |    | This understanding is unique                     |    |
| rarely another speaks it,                         |    | in its inner core or resolve;                    |    |
| rarely anyone hears it                            |    | diffuse and pointless are the ways               |    |
| even hearing it, no one really knows it.          | 29 | irresolute men understand.                       | 41 |

| Undiscerning men who delightin the tenets of ritual lore |     | Arjuna  |    |
|--|-----|---|----|
| utter florid speech, proclaiming,                            |     | Krishna, what defines a man                   |    |
| "There is nothing else!"                                     | 42  | deep in contemplation whose insight           |    |
|  |     | and thought are sure? How would he speak?     |    |
| Driven by desire, they strive after heaven                   |     | How would he sit? How would he move?          | 54 |
| and contrive to win powers and delights,                     |     |   |    |
| but their intricate ritual language                          |     | Lord Krishna                                  |    |
| bears only the fruit of action ( karma ) in rebirth.  | 43  | 2014 11 101114                                |    |
| bears only the fruit of action (narma) in repiren            | 10  | When he gives up desires in his mind,         |    |
| Obsessed with powers and delights,                           |     | is content with the self within himself,      |    |
| their reason lost in words,                                  |     | then he is said to be a man                   |    |
|  |     |   |    |
| they do not find in contemplation                            | 4.4 | whose insight is sure, Arjuna.                | 55 |
| this understanding of inner resolve.                         | 44  | YATI CC                                       |    |
|  |     | When suffering does not disturb his mind,     |    |
| Arjuna, the realm of sacred lore                             |     | when his craving for pleasures has vanished.  |    |
| is natureCbeyond its triad of qualities (gunas),             |     | when attraction, fear, and anger are gone,    |    |
| dualities, and mundane rewards,                              |     | he is called a sage whose thought is sure.    | 56 |
| be forever lucid, alive to your self (Atman).                | 45  |   |    |
|  |     | When he shows no preference                   |    |
| For the discerning priest,                                   |     | in fortune or misfortune                      |    |
| all of sacred lore   |     | and neither exults nor hates,                 |    |
| has no more value than a well                                |     | his insight is sure.                          | 57 |
| when water flows everywhere.                                 | 46  | O .   |    |
| When water hows every where.                                 | 10  | When, like a tortoise retracting              |    |
| Be intent on action (karma),                                 |     | its limbs, he withdraws his senses            |    |
| not on the fruits of action;                                 |     | completely from sensuous objects,             |    |
| avoid attraction to the fruits                               |     | his insight is sure.                          | 58 |
|  | 47  | ins insignt is sure.                          | 50 |
| and attachment to inaction!                                  | 47  | Communication for the                         |    |
|  |     | Sensuous objects fade                         |    |
| Perform actions, firm in discipline (yoga),                  |     | when the embodied self abstains from food;    |    |
| relinquishing attachment;                                    |     | the taste lingers, but it too fades           |    |
| be impartial to failure and success                          |     | in the vision of higher truth.                | 59 |
| this equanimity is called discipline (yoga).                 | 48  |   |    |
|  |     | Even when a man of wisdom                     |    |
| Arjuna, action (karma) is far inferior                       |     | tries to control them, Arjuna,                |    |
| to the discipline (yoga) of understanding;                   |     | the bewildering senses                        |    |
| so seek refuge in understanding—pitiful                      |     | attack his mind with violence.                | 60 |
| are men drawn by the fruit of action (karma).                | 49  |   |    |
|  |     | Controlling them all,                         |    |
| Disciplined by understanding,                                |     | with discipline (yoga) he should focus on me; |    |
| one abandons both good and evil deeds;                       |     | when his senses are under control,            |    |
| so arm yourself for discipline ( yoga )—              |     | his insight is sure.                          | 61 |
| discipline ( yoga ) is skill in action.               | 50  | nis maigne is sui e.                          | 01 |
| discipline (yoga) is skill ill action.                       | 50  | Droading about conqueue abjects               |    |
| TAT: 1: 1: 11 1 . 1:   |     | Brooding about sensuous objects               |    |
| Wise men disciplined by understanding                        |     | makes attachment to them grow;                |    |
| relinquish the fruit born of action (karma);                 |     | from attachment desire arises,                |    |
| freed from these bonds of rebirth.                           |     | from desire anger is born.                    | 62 |
| they reach a place beyond decay.                             | 51  |   |    |
|  |     | From anger comes confusion;                   |    |
| When your understanding passes beyond                        |     | from confusion memory lapses;                 |    |
| the swamp of delusion,                                       |     | from broken memory understanding is lost;     |    |
| you will be indifferent to all                               |     | from loss of understanding, he is ruined.     | 63 |
| that is heard in sacred lore.                                | 52  | -   |    |
|  |     | But a man of inner strength                   |    |
| When you understanding turns                                 |     | whose senses experience objects               |    |
| from sacred lore to stand fixed.                             |     | without attraction and hatred,                |    |
| immovable in contemplation,                                  |     | in self-control, finds serenity.              | 64 |
| then you will reach discipline ( yoga ).              | 53  | 5511 551145 551 511145                        | 01 |
| aren you win reach abdipline (youn).                         | 55  |   |    |

| In serenity, all his sorrows                         |    | Action (karma) is the means for a sage            |    |
|--|----|---|----|
| dissolve;  |    | who seeks to mature in discipline (yoga);         |    |
| his reason becomes serene,                           |    | tranquility is the means                          |    |
| his understanding sure.                              | 65 | for one who is mature in discipline (yoga).       | 3  |
| Without discipline,                                  |    | He is said to be mature in discipline (yoga)      |    |
| he has no understanding or inner power;              |    | when he has renounced all intention               |    |
| without inner power, he has no peace;                |    | and is detached                                   |    |
| and without peace where is joy?                      | 66 | from sense objects and actions.                   | 4  |
| If his mind submits to the play                      |    | He should elevate himself by the self (Atman),    |    |
| of the senses,                                       |    | not degrade himself;                              |    |
| they drive away insight,                             |    | for the self (Atman) is its own friend            |    |
| as wind drives a ship on water.                      | 67 | and its own worst foe.                            | 5  |
| So, Great Warrior, when withdrawal                   |    | The self (Atman) is the friend of a man           |    |
| of the senses  |    | who masters himself through the self (Atman),     |    |
| from sense objects is complete,                      |    | but for a man without self-mastery,               |    |
| discernment is firm.                                 | 68 | the self is like an enemy at war.                 | 6  |
| When it is night for all creatures,                  |    | The higher self (Atman) of a tranquil man         |    |
| a master of restraint is awake;                      |    | whose self is mastered                            |    |
| when they are awake, it is night                     |    | is perfectly poised in cold or heat,              |    |
| for the sage who sees reality.                       | 69 | joy or suffering, honor or contempt.              | 7  |
| As the mountain depths of the ocean                  |    | Self-contented in knowledge (jnana) and judgment, |    |
| are unmoved when waters rush into it,                |    | his senses subdued, on the summit of existence,   |    |
| so the man unmoved when desires enter him            |    | impartial to clay, stone, or gold,                |    |
| attains a peace that eludes the man of many desires. | 70 | the man of discipline (yogi) is disciplined.      | 8  |
| When he renounces all desires                        |    | He is set apart by his disinterest                |    |
| and acts without craving,                            |    | toward comrades, allies, enemies,                 |    |
| possessiveness, or individuality,                    |    | neutrals, nonpartisans, foes, friends,            |    |
| he finds peace (the bliss of nirvana ).       |    | good and even evil men.                           | 9  |
|  |    | A man of discipline (yogi) should always          |    |
| This is the place of infinite spirit;                |    | discipline himself, remain in seclusion.          |    |
| achieving it, one is freed from delusion;            |    | isolated, his thought and self well controlled,   |    |
| abiding in it even at the time of death,             |    | without possessions or hope.                      | 10 |
| one finds the pure calm of infinity.                 | 72 | 1   |    |
|  |    | He should fix for himself                         |    |
|  |    | a firm seat in a pure place,                      |    |
|  |    | neither too high nor too low,                     |    |
|  |    | covered in cloth, deerskin, or grass.             | 11 |
| THE SIXTH TEACHING                                   |    | He should focus his mind and restrain             |    |
|  |    | the activity of his thought and senses;           |    |
| The Man of Discipline (Yoga)                         |    | sitting on that seat, he should practice          |    |
|  |    | discipline for the purification of the self.      | 12 |
| Lord Krishna   |    |   |    |
|  |    | He should keep his body, head                     |    |
| One who does what must be done                       |    | and neck aligned, immobile, steady;               |    |
| without concern for the fruits                       |    | he should gaze at the tip of the nose             |    |
| is a man of renunciation (sannyasin) and discipline, |    | and not let his glance wander.                    | 13 |
| not one who shuns ritual fire and rites.             | 1  | m 10. 11.0 % %                                    |    |
| Know that discipling (your) Ariums                   |    | The self tranquil, his fear dispelled,            |    |
| Know that discipline ( yoga ), Arjuna,        |    | firm in his vow of celibacy, his mind restrained, |    |
| is what men call renunciation (sannyasam);           |    | let him sit with discipline,                      |    |
| no man is disciplined                                | 2  | his thought fixed on me, intent on me.            | 14 |
| without renouncing willful intent.                   | 2  |   |    |

| Disciplinging himself, his mind controlled, a man of discipline ( yogi ) finds peace, the pure calm that exists in me.   | 15             | When his mind is tranquil, perfect joy comes to the man of discipline (yogi); his passion is calmed, he is without sin, being one with the infinite spirit (Brahman).  | 27 |
|---|----------------|--|----|
| Gluttons have no discipline,nor the man who starves himself,nor he who sleeps excessivelyor suffers wakefulness.  | 16             | Constantly disciplining himself, free from sin, the man of discipline easily achieves perfect joy in harmony with the infinite spirit ( Brahman ).  | 28 |
| When a man disciplines his diet and diversions, his physical actions, his sleeping and waking, discipline ( yoga ) destroys his sorrow.  | 17             | Arming himself with discipline (yoga), seeing everything with an equal eye, he sees the self (Atman) in all creatures and all creatures in the self (Atman).   | 29 |
| When his controlled thought rests within the self ( Atman ) alone, without craving objects of desire, he is said to be disciplined.  | 18             | He who sees me everywhere and sees everything in me will not be lost to me, and I will not be lost to him.   | 30 |
| "He does not waver, like a lamp sheltered from the wind" is the simile recalled for a man of discipline ( yogi ), restrained in thought and practicing self-discipline.  | 19             | I exist in all creatures, so the disciplined man ( yogi ) devoted to me grasps the oneness of life; wherever he is, he is in men.   | 31 |
| When his thought ceases, chekced by the exercise of discipline ( yoga ), he is content within the self ( Atman ), seeing the self ( Atman ) through himself.   | 20             | When he sees identity in everything, whether joy or suffering, through analogy with the self ( Atman ), he is deemed a man of pure discipline ( yogi ).  | 32 |
| Absolute joy beyond the senses can only be grasped by understanding; when one knows it, he abides there   | 20             | Arjuna   | 32 |
|   |                |  |    |
| and never wanders from this reality.  | 21             | You define this discipline by equanimity, Krishna;   |    |
| Obtaining it, he thinks there is no greater gain; abiding there, he is unmoved,   |                | by equanimity, Krishna;but in my faltering condition,I see no ground for it.   | 33 |
| Obtaining it, he thinks there is no greater gain; abiding there, he is unmoved, even by deep suffering.   | 21             | by equanimity, Krishna; but in my faltering condition, I see no ground for it.  Krishna, the mind is faltering, violent, strong, and stubborn;   | 33 |
| Obtaining it, he thinks there is no greater gain; abiding there, he is unmoved, even by deep suffering.  Since he knows that discipline ( yoga ) means unbinding the bonds of suffering, he should practice discipline ( yoga ) resolutely,   | 22             | by equanimity, Krishna; but in my faltering condition, I see no ground for it.  Krishna, the mind is faltering, violent, strong, and stubborn; I find it as difficult to hold as the wind.   | 33 |
| Obtaining it, he thinks there is no greater gain; abiding there, he is unmoved, even by deep suffering.  Since he knows that discipline ( yoga ) means unbinding the bonds of suffering, he should practice discipline ( yoga ) resolutely, without despair dulling his reason.  He should entirely relinquish  |                | by equanimity, Krishna; but in my faltering condition, I see no ground for it.  Krishna, the mind is faltering, violent, strong, and stubborn; I find it as difficult to hold as the wind.  Lord Krishna  Without doubt, the mind  |    |
| Obtaining it, he thinks there is no greater gain; abiding there, he is unmoved, even by deep suffering.  Since he knows that discipline (yoga) means unbinding the bonds of suffering, he should practice discipline (yoga) resolutely, without despair dulling his reason.  He should entirely relinquish desires aroused by willful intent; he should entirely control  | 22             | by equanimity, Krishna; but in my faltering condition, I see no ground for it.  Krishna, the mind is faltering, violent, strong, and stubborn; I find it as difficult to hold as the wind.  Lord Krishna  Without doubt, the mind is unsteady and hard to hold, but practice and dispassion  | 34 |
| Obtaining it, he thinks there is no greater gain; abiding there, he is unmoved, even by deep suffering.  Since he knows that discipline (yoga) means unbinding the bonds of suffering, he should practice discipline (yoga) resolutely, without despair dulling his reason.  He should entirely relinquish desires aroused by willful intent; he should entirely control his senses with his mind.  He should gradually become tranquil,  | 22             | by equanimity, Krishna; but in my faltering condition, I see no ground for it.  Krishna, the mind is faltering, violent, strong, and stubborn; I find it as difficult to hold as the wind.  Lord Krishna  Without doubt, the mind is unsteady and hard to hold, but practice and dispassion can restrain it, Arjuna.  In my view, discipline (yoga) eludes   |    |
| Obtaining it, he thinks there is no greater gain; abiding there, he is unmoved, even by deep suffering.  Since he knows that discipline (yoga) means unbinding the bonds of suffering, he should practice discipline (yoga) resolutely, without despair dulling his reason.  He should entirely relinquish desires aroused by willful intent; he should entirely control his senses with his mind.  | 22             | by equanimity, Krishna; but in my faltering condition, I see no ground for it.  Krishna, the mind is faltering, violent, strong, and stubborn; I find it as difficult to hold as the wind.  Lord Krishna  Without doubt, the mind is unsteady and hard to hold, but practice and dispassion can restrain it, Arjuna.   | 34 |
| Obtaining it, he thinks there is no greater gain; abiding there, he is unmoved, even by deep suffering.  Since he knows that discipline (yoga) means unbinding the bonds of suffering, he should practice discipline (yoga) resolutely, without despair dulling his reason.  He should entirely relinquish desires aroused by willful intent; he should entirely control his senses with his mind.  He should gradually become tranquil, firmly controlling his understanding; focusing his mind on the self (Atman), | 222324 | by equanimity, Krishna; but in my faltering condition, I see no ground for it.  Krishna, the mind is faltering, violent, strong, and stubborn; I find it as difficult to hold as the wind.  Lord Krishna  Without doubt, the mind is unsteady and hard to hold, but practice and dispassion can restrain it, Arjuna.  In my view, discipline (yoga) eludes the unrestrained self, but if he strives to master himself, | 34 |

| what way is there for him, Krishna?                             | 37  | THE FOURTEENTH TEACHING                              |      |
|---|-----|--|------|
| Doomed by his double failure,                                   |     | The Triad of Nature's Qualities                      |      |
| is he not like a cloud split apart,                             |     | Lord Krishna   |      |
| unsettled, deluded on the path                                  |     | LUTU KTISHHU   |      |
| of the infinite spirit ( Brahman )?                      | 38  | I -lll +l+!ll  |      |
| Krishna, only you can dispel                                    |     | I shall teach you still more                         |      |
| this doubt of mine completely;                                  |     | of the farthest knowledge one can know;              |      |
| there is no one but you   |     | knowing it, all the sages                            |      |
| to dispel this doubt.   | 39  | have reached perfection.                             | 1    |
| 1 17 1  |     | Resorting to this knowledge,                         |      |
| Lord Krishna  |     | they follow the ways of my sacred duty;              |      |
|   |     | in creation they are not reborn,                     |      |
| Arjuna, he does not suffer                                      |     | in dissolution they suffer no sorrow.                | 2    |
| doom in this world or the next;                                 |     | in dissolution they suffer no sofrow.                |      |
| any man who acts with honor                                     |     | My wamh is the great infinite spirit                 |      |
| cannot go the wrong way, my friend.                             | 40  | My womb is the great infinite spirit;                |      |
|   |     | in it I place the embryo,                            |      |
| Fallen in discipline (yoga), he reaches                         |     | and from this, Arjuna,                               | 2    |
| worlds made by his virtue, wherein he dwells                    |     | comes the origin of all creatures.                   | 3    |
| for endless years, until he is reborn                           |     | ml · C· · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · · ·            |      |
| in a house of upright and noble men.                            | 41  | The infinite spirit is the great womb                |      |
|   |     | of al forms that come to be                          |      |
| Or he is born in a family                                       |     | in all wombs,  |      |
| of disciplined men;   |     | and I am the seed-giving father.                     | 4    |
| the kind of birth in the world                                  |     |  |      |
| that is very hard to win.                                       | 42  | Lucidity (sattva), passion (rajas), dark inertia (ta |      |
|   |     | these qualities (gunas) inherent in nature (prakr    | iti) |
| There he regains a depth  |     | bind the unchanging                                  |      |
| of understanding from his former life                           |     | embodied self in the body.                           | 5    |
| and strives further   |     |  |      |
| to perfection, Arjuna.  | 43  | Lucidity (sattva), being untainted,                  |      |
| to perfection, mjunu.   | 15  | is luminous and without decay;                       |      |
| Carried by the force of his previous practice,                  |     | it binds one with attachment                         |      |
| a man who seeks to learn discipline ( yoga )             |     | to joy and knowledge, Arjuna.                        | 6    |
| passes beyond sacred lore ( Vedic hymns )                |     | ,,   |      |
| that expresses the infinite spirit ( Brahman ) in words. | 11  | Know that passion (rajas) is emotional,              |      |
| that expresses the minite spirit (branman) in words.            | 44  | born of craving and attachment;                      |      |
| The man of dissipline (year) striving                           |     | it binds the embodied self                           |      |
| The man of discipline ( yogi ), striving                 |     | with attachment to action (karma).                   | 7    |
| with effort, purified of his sins,                              |     |  | •    |
| perfected through many births.                                  | 4 = | Know that dark inertia (tamas) born of ignorance     | ρ.   |
| finds a higher way.   | 45  | as the delusion of every embodied self;              | C    |
|  • 1 1 • •  |     | it binds one with negligence,                        |      |
| He is deemed superior   |     | indolence, and sleep, Arjuna.                        | 8    |
| to men of penance,  |     | muolence, and sieep, Arjuna.                         | U    |
| men of knowledge, and men of action;                            |     | I valdity addicts one to lay                         |      |
| be a man of discipline, Arjuna!                                 | 46  | Lucidity addicts one to joy,                         |      |
|   |     | and passion to actions,                              |      |
| Of all the men of discipline,                                   |     | but dark inertia obscures knowledge                  | 0    |
| the faithful man devoted to me,                                 |     | and addicts one to negligence.                       | 9    |
| with his inner self deep in mine,                               |     | ****   |      |
| I deem most disciplined.  | 47  | When lucidity dominates                              |      |
|   |     | passion and inertia, it thrives;                     |      |
|   |     | and likewise when passion or inertia                 |      |
|   |     | dominates the other two.                             | 10   |
|   |     | When the light of knowlege                           |      |
|   |     | shines in all the body's senses,                     |      |
|   |     | then one knows                                       |      |
|   |     | that lucidity prevails.                              | 11   |

| When passion increases, Arjuna,                                      |    |   |      |
|--|----|---|------|
| greed and activity,  |    | Lord, what signs mark a man                           |      |
| involvement in actions,  |    | who passes beyond the three qualities?                |      |
| disquiet, and longing arise.   | 12 | What does he do to cross                              |      |
| 1,   |    | beyond these qualities?                               | 21   |
| When dark inertia increases,   |    |   |      |
| obscurity and inactivity,  |    | Krishna   |      |
| negligence   |    |   |      |
| and delusion, arise.   | 13 | He does not dislike light                             |      |
|  |    | or activity or delusion;                              |      |
| When lucidity prevails,  |    | when they cease to exist                              |      |
| the self whose body dies   |    | he does not desire them.                              | 22   |
| enters the untainted worlds  |    |   |      |
| of those who know reality.   | 14 | He remains disinterested,                             |      |
|  |    | unmoved by qualities of nature;                       |      |
| When he dies in passion,   |    | he never wavers, knowing                              |      |
| he is born among the lovers of action;                               |    | that only qualities are in motion.                    | 23   |
| so when he dies in dark inertia,                                     |    | may omy quanties are in motion.                       |      |
| he is born into wombs of folly.                                      | 15 | Self-reliant, impartial to suffering                  |      |
| ne is som mee womes or long.   | 10 | and joy, to clay, stone, or gold,                     |      |
| The fruit of good conduct  |    | the resolute man is the same                          |      |
| is pure and untainted they say,                                      |    | to foe and friends, to blame and praise.              | 24   |
| but suffering is the fruit of passion,                               |    | to foe and friends, to blame and praise.              | 2.   |
| ignorance the fruit of dark inertia.                                 | 16 | The same in honor, and disgrace,                      |      |
| ignorance the fruit of dark mercia.                                  | 10 | to ally and enemy, a man                              |      |
| From lucidity knowledge is born;                                     |    | who abandons involvements                             |      |
| from passion comes greed;  |    | transcends the qualities of nature.                   | 25   |
| from dark inertia comes negligence,                                  |    | transcends the quanties of nature.                    | 23   |
| delusion, and ignorance.   | 17 | One who serves me faithfully,                         |      |
| Men who are lucid go upward;   | 17 | with discipline of devotion,                          |      |
| men of passion stay in between;                                      |    | transcends the qualities of nature                    |      |
| men of dark inertia,   |    | and shares in the infinite spirit ( Brahman ). | 26   |
| caught in vile ways, sink low.                                       | 18 | and shares in the minnite spirit (brunnan).           | 20   |
| caught in viie ways, sink low.                                       | 10 | I am the infinite spirit's foundation,                |      |
| When a man of vision sees  |    | immortal and immutable,                               |      |
|  |    |   |      |
| nature's ( prakriti ) qualities ( gunas ) as the agent |    | the basis of eternal sacred duty (dharma)             | 27   |
| of action and knows what lies beyond,                                | 10 | and of perfect joy.                                   | 27   |
| he enters into my being.   | 19 |   |      |
| Transcending the three qualities (gunas)                             |    |   |      |
| that are the body's source, the self                                 |    | * * *   |      |
| achieves immortality, freed from the sorrows                         |    |   |      |
| of birth, death, and old age.  | 20 | The Rhaggued Cita Darbara Stalan M.                   | 1100 |
| or on an, acath, and old age.  | 20 | The Bhagavad Gita, Barbara Stoler Mi                  | nei, |
| Ariuna   |    | trans. Bantam Dell, 1986.                             |      |